“ Andy, we've shed many tears missing you this week but we take comfort in knowing you are one of God's Angels now and that you are in a better place. Please know we are thinking about your family and praying for their comfort. Davin is still struggling but I know each day will get a little bit easier. Remembering his favorite things about you keeps you in his memory and even though it is painful now it helps the healing. Keep watching over him until you two meet again on God's playground for another game of "don't touch the ground".

“ My heart goes out to little Chris and his family. It is hard to lose a family member! But I'm sure it is harder losing a brother. Andy always had me smiling on the bus when I'd sit up front with him. Him and Chris seemed to like to fight over my Ipod so they could play my spongebob game. Andy told me to come visit them this year at school, but I didn't have the time. I will always miss you Andy!!

“ Elizabeth, I cannot even begin to imagine what you are going thru, I didn't know Andy, but having known you for a long time, my heart is completely broken, I have shed many tears for you, Andy, his brother, and the rest of your family. You have been in my thoughts and prayers since he fell ill...and you will continue to be as you move forward. Keep your head up Liz, and try to take comfort in knowing he's up there watching over his mama.
